And you thought you used your cellphone a lot ...

CNN

BlackBerry said Thursday it was making progress as a network outage entered its fourth day, testing the nerves of users who rely on the smartphones for business and social matters. With all the hubub over mobile devices, RedEye decided to take a look at just how dependent Americans are on their phones—turns out, it's not nearly as much as other countries.

MOST CELLPHONE SUBSCRIPTIONS WORLDWIDE

China's two special administration regions—Macau and Hong Kong—have more cellphone subscriptions per capita than anywhere else in the world. For every 100 people in Macau, there are 206.43 cellphone subscriptions, according to recent statistics from the International Telecommunications Union. Hong Kong is second with 190.21 subscriptions for every 100 people. Here's a look at the top 10.

WE'RE HIGH, BUT NOT THAT HIGH

In terms of cellphone subscriptions, the U.S. ranks 114th, with 89.86 subscriptions per 100 people. CNN

Beyond cellphones: Americans and their wireless devices

CNN

The number of wireless devices in the U.S. now outnumbers the people living here.

Connected devices with wireless subscriptions rose to 327.6 million in the second quarter, according to a new report from wireless industry association CTIA.

That represents a 9 percent increase since the same period last year. The U.S. population currently clocks in at 312.4 million, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

The growing popularity of smartphones and tablets such as the iPad means that many Americans now have two or more devices with a wireless plan.

"Americans love wireless and continue to rely on the most cutting-edge and innovative devices," Steve Largent, president of CTIA, said in a statement. "Clearly, we're using wireless more every day, and the consensus of experts is that demand will continue to skyrocket."

The good news for consumers is that, at the same time, the average monthly wireless bill actually fell slightly to $47.23, down from $47.47 a year ago.

Lessons from an Apple experiment

Matt Kuttan
» redeye@tribune.com

Last Thursday was a sad day in my advertising office. It was the day after the death of Apple founder Steve Jobs, and there may be no other business that is as dependent on Apple products as advertising.

At the morning status meeting of my small, Mac-only office, one of my colleagues proposed we turn off all our Apple products—iPads, iPods, iPhones and all the other iStuff plugged in around the place—for a day in honor of Jobs. His proposal was met with nearly unanimous approval before rational minds prevailed for the good of office productivity.

Especially on Friday, as the new iPhone 4S arrives in stores, I can't even imagine what my day would be like without Apple products ... or can I? Here's how I think my day might go down.

8:59 a.m. It's almost 9 a.m.?! So much for waking up at 7 a.m.—or getting to work on time—without the alarm setting on my iPhone. I haven't owned an alarm clock—or even a watch, for that matter—in years.

9:30 a.m. No need to stop for a morning pick-me-up coffee without my Starbucks payment app. But I guess that's OK after I overslept.

9:33 a.m. There's no way I'm catching the last Purple Line express without my iPad transit app. It's gonna be a long commute.

9:34 a.m. No news apps, either. Looks like I'll be sifting through discarded papers to catch up on the day's headlines.

11 a.m. The thrill of finding a box of pencils at work to jot down some notes would be a lot sweeter if I could only find a pencil sharpener.

11:30 a.m. All right, forget pencils. I'm on to writing with ball-point pens. Aargh! Hand cramp!

11:45 a.m. On a day like this, I'd say hold all my calls but, yeah, the phone thing. No outbound calls on the land line either. All of my client and vendor numbers are stored on my iPhone and iMac.

11:55 a.m. Should the pages face up or down to send a fax? Damn, I can't remember.

12:15 p.m. Oh, this is getting bad. My favorite food truck moved, and I didn't know because I didn't have access to Twitter.

3:55 p.m. Sooo hungry ... and I just missed out on the kicker I wanted to pick up off the waiver wire in my fantasy football league.

6:20 p.m. Finally, time to go home. But without my iPod, I'm forced to listen to all the Bears fans around me complain about Mike Martz.

8:30 p.m. Time to watch something. On the bright side, at least that stupid Qwikster idea is toast.

10:30 p.m. What?! It's my wife's birthday? I guess I really do need those Facebook reminders. Oh, this day without Apple products is a disaster!

11:59 p.m. Just one more minute until this day is over. Maybe I'll get the new iPhone 4S first thing tomorrow, and then the first order of business: Download an app to send flowers to my wife.

UN-FARE

Chicago Tribune

Metra plans to scale back proposed fare hikes of up to 69 percent for Chicago riders in the face of complaints that city residents would be paying disproportionately higher increases than suburban customers, the Tribune has learned.

The commuter rail agency on Friday is expected to revise its schedule of proposed increases for one-way, 10-ride and monthly passes to make them more equitable than the fare hikes initially recommended by Metra's staff in September.

Those increases are coming under fire from state legislators, aldermen, community groups and riders who charge that Chicagoans—particularly South Side residents—would be socked by fare hikes ranging from 44 percent to 69 percent, while suburban riders would only see increases ranging from 9 percent to 34 percent.

BACKGROUND

Metra's fares are distance-based. Riders who live in the farthest suburbs pay more for tickets than customers who live in Chicago and close-in suburbs. But some of the recommended percentage increases were up to three times higher for close-in zones than for distant ones.

Metra wouldn't disclose the revised fare hike proposal before board members see it Friday, but spokeswoman Judy Pardonnet said the hikes for Chicago riders' fares would be "significantly less" than the ones originally proposed.

"The goal is to have a fair fare proposal," Pardonnet said.

State Rep. Barbara Flynn Currie and Sen. Kwame Raoul, both influential South Side

Metra expected to pull back on rate hikes for Chicago commuters

Democrats, wrote Metra CEO Alex Clifford expressing "grave concerns" over the proposed fare structures.

A coalition of South Side church congregations and community groups also blasted the recommended hikes as discriminatory.

"We request that you immediately refrain from such fare hikes and withdraw any ... that have an adverse and disproportionate impact on the basis of race, color, national origin, and income," said Rev. Booker Vance in a letter to Metra.

Vance is pastor of St. Stephens Lutheran Church and president of Southsiders Organized for Unity and Liberation, or SOUL. The group includes 25 congregations and community groups.

Many commuters board Metra trains on the North Side as well, however, and would face the same percentage increases.

Fall fireworks in the forecast

Chicago Tribune

It's fall-leaves season in Chicago—and this year's predicted to be big.

Weather is a key player in the color change, and experts say conditions this fall should produce an especially bright display. While each species reaches its peak at its own pace, many observers await the mid-October transformation of the colorful sugar maple, which appears to be happening right on time.

Leaves change when dwindling daylight slows the production of chlorophyll, uncovering yellows that have been hiding behind the greens, according to Ron Wolford, horticulture educator for the University of Illinois Extension.

Sun-soaked days followed by crisp nights such as those the Chicago area has experienced this fall allow trees to use that energy to increase the production of sugar, which amplifies the red color of the leaves.

The appearance of hues such as red and purple also depends in part on whether a plant's genetics allow it to produce certain chemical compounds as well as on how acidic or alkaline its leaves are, said Ed Hedborn, manager of plant records for the Morton Arboretum in Lisle.

Wolford called the transformation "sort of like a miracle" and said every neighborhood seems to have at least a few stunning trees.

"I love just walking around and the crunch of leaves, the smell you get," he said.

Angels looking for new HQ

1 The Guardian Angels may land in Boystown as early as next spring. The unarmed, all-volunteer crime fighters are carefully considering the neighborhood for the location of the Chicago chapter's headquarters.

The Chicago chapter—which celebrates its 30th anniversary this month—has been without a central office for almost a decade, according to Miguel Fuentes, 40, chapter leader and national director of the U.S. chapters.

Last month, a small group of Boystown residents met with Fuentes and other Angels at the Center on Halsted to explore the possibility of joining forces in response to a summer of headline-grabbing criminal activity in the area. At the meeting, the Angels stressed their goal to increase patrols in the area once the chapter secures a location for its central office.

Reports: Custody battle led to shooting

6 LOS ANGELES A custody battle may have provided the motive for a deadly shooting at a Southern California hair salon that left eight people dead, according to CNN affiliate reports.

A ninth person was critically injured in the incident Wednesday at Salon Meritage in Seal Beach, Calif., police said. Officers responding to the salon found six people dead inside the business.

Three people were taken to a hospital, where two died from their injuries, police told reporters Wednesday.

The suspect, 42-year-old Scott Evans De Kraai of Huntington Beach, was arrested without incident as he was trying to leave the scene in a vehicle, a police statement said. He faces multiple counts of murder, according to police.

Authorities have not divulged a motive for the shootings, but CNN affiliate KTLA reported that Scott's ex-wife, Michelle, was a stylist at the salon and that the two were involved in a custody battle over their son.

Michelle De Kraai was among those killed in the shooting, according to KTLA.

Scott De Kraai's neighbors told the station that he moved into his Huntington Beach home with his son several years ago but that he was upset about having joint custody of the child.

"I know there was a custody battle," neighbor Jo Cornhall told KTLA.

One of Michelle De Kraai's neighbors, who was not named, told KTLA that Michelle took out a restraining order against her ex-husband Tuesday.

An online search of court records shows Scott and Michelle De Kraai filed for divorce in 2007, but activity in the case continued through this week.

ADRIAN!!!

LOOK OUT, BEARS — THE $100 MILLION MAN IS COMING TO SOLDIER FIELD

Lesser runners than Adrian Peterson have had their way with the Bears defense in the first five games. Now comes the man himself when Minnesota arrives for a Sunday night game at Soldier Field. "He's ... if not the best, he's up there with the top three backs that I have faced in the NFL since I've been here," Bears linebacker Lance Briggs said Thursday.

That's pretty high praise, but AP has the numbers to back it up. Peterson set the NFL single-game rushing record of 296 yards against San Diego in 2007. In 2008 he led the league in rushing with 1,760 yards. And this year he is averaging just shy of 100 yards a game, best in the NFC.

How much does the NFL love Peterson? A lot. Check out a sampling of what the league is saying about him. REDEYE, TRIBUNE CONTRIBUTED

“Every team in the league, when they get ready to play the Vikings, they are saying, ‘How are we going to stop No. 28?’”

— Vikings coach Leslie Frazier, to espn.com

“If there was a blueprint on how to stop him, it would have been long ago. When you have a great player like that, there really is no blueprint.”

— Lions head coach Jim Schwartz

“It's kind of like he's fighting when he runs. He's fighting everybody on the field and he's relentless.”

FOUR SCORE

BEARS VS. VIKINGS

Every week before the Bears game, RedEye's sports crew gets to the point. Here's what we expect Sunday.

BEARS 23, MINNESOTA 10

The irrational force meets the insensible object.

— Elliott Serrano

BEARS 23, MINNESOTA 10

Both QBs could be handing out pick-6s like lottery tickets.

— Phil Thompson

BEARS 21, MINNESOTA 13

Jay Cutler stays conscious through 3 1/2 quarters.

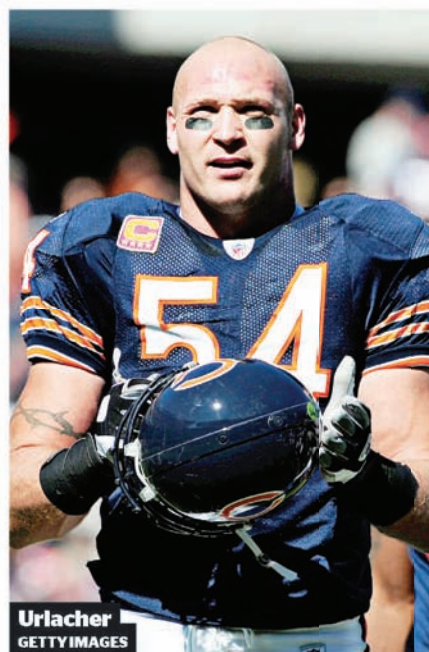

— Julie DiCaro

BEARS 24, MINNESOTA 10

The Bears hold AP to as many TDs as the score I got on my AP statistics exam.

BEAR NECESSITIES

Call the therapist

Brian Urlacher admits Bears defenders are experiencing "trust" issues, but he denies he and teammate Lance Briggs were arguing with each other on the sidelines during the 24-13 loss to the Lions on Monday night. "My daughter was like, 'Did you fight with Lance on the sideline?' I said, 'No, why?' She said: 'Well, you looked like you were really mad when you talked to him.'"

Alert the queen

Earl Bennett likely remains more than a week away from returning, but the Bears got good news Thursday when the wide receiver returned to practice. Bennett suffered a chest injury in the Week 2 loss at New Orleans. Bennett's return could be targeted for next week, when the Bears face the Tampa Bay Buccaneers at Wembley Stadium in London.

Take a seat

Lovie Smith hinted at change after Monday night's 24-13 loss at Detroit, and the safety position will undergo a major face-lift. Chris Harris and Brandon Meriweather will be benched in favor of Major Wright and rookie Chris Conte for Sunday's game against the Vikings. Harris confirmed Thursday. Wright and Conte received the first-team reps at strong and free safety, respectively, during Thursday's practice.

Congratulations and welcome, Theo Epstein.

You're about to become the best general manager in Chicago.

Full disclosure: The field is a little weak, but you've earned it.

Very little the Cubs do excites me, but this is a game-changer. Also, I hear he likes Ryne Sandberg. Go get him. Unless you can't bear giving up Mike Quade.

One suggestion: Cubs President Crane Kenney. Hmm. Perhaps we can send him to Iowa to overlook the Cubs' Triple-A team over there. Forever, maybe. I don't think we'll be needing the gee-whiz kid hanging around anymore.

Players, beware. Starlin Castro, pay attention. If this guy doesn't get things turned around here, mark my words, no one will.

And as noted, you're it.

White Sox, Kenny Williams. We're supposed to be in awe he thought Paul Konerko would make a good player/manager? I guess we're also supposed to be in awe over the Robin Ventura thing. Someone pass a note to the mad genius that good players don't make good managers. (Except for Sandberg, of course!)

Congratulations, Kenny. You're insane.

My other favorite is Jerry Angelo. Not quite sure what the Bears are paying him for, but he thought during the offseason the safeties would get better, the receiver corps would be better with Roy Williams and the offensive line would improve by losing Olin Kreutz and adding Gabe Carimi.

Wow. Big congrats here. Only Jerry Angelo could trade for Jay Cutler and then proceed to waste his prime years on bad line play, average receivers and clueless coaching. That is a stunning achievement. Stunning.

Oh, sorry, Lovie Smith. Didn't mean to wake you. Back to your coma. And FYI, your safeties stink. Your cover-2 covers no one, and you're now third in a four-team race.

Upside: I love it when the Bears season ends early. It gives me time to go to pumpkin farms, get some doughnuts and cider, and wish I lived in Green Bay—with a real NFL team.

As for the other GMs, Stan Bowman and Gar Forman, I like you. Too early to be judged like the other idiots. You get a pass for now.

But oh, your time is coming ...

BAG BOY IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

“Do I think about the Hall of Fame? Yeah. God willing, I play long enough to be selected.”

1 What should the Cubs offer Boston as compensation if they sign GM Theo Epstein?

A 50 percent-off coupon for a 103-year-old curse.

Wrigley Field "rally rats."

The Red Sox get Theo's first World Series ring with the Cubs. He gets to keep the next 40.

Alfonso Soriano's contract is the only acceptable answer.

Alfonso Soriano and Carlos Zambrano. Epstein won't be needing them.

2 Once the Cubs have a new GM, what should be his first move?

To put floaty targets in the urinal troughs in the men's bathrooms.

His first move should be to Canada, before it's too late.

Take down the "Have You Seen This Man?" fliers from area Starbucks.

Clean out Hendry's mini-fridge. Stuff's starting to move in there.

Getting rid of Alfonso Soriano and Carlos Zambrano.

3 How can a federal mediator resolve the NBA labor talks?

Persuade David Stern and Dwyane Wade they should stay together for the sake of the kids.

Don't get the feds involved! They'll wind up using tax dollars to bail out the season.

He can threaten to go mediate in Italy unless his demands are met.

If beer commercials have taught me anything, they should all drink beer together.

Pull the players in a room and say "no one misses you."

4 If White Sox catcher A.J. Pierzynski can drink an occasional "rally beer" ...

... I can do the same if I'm trying to rally at work. Looks like it's beer o'clock!

... Patrick Kane should've "rallied" to three Stanley Cups and a gold medal by now.

... then I can drink the occasional "rally bourbon" with a side of hookers.

... then people need to stop looking at me funny when I do my "ratings kegstands."

... I can go on an occasional "rally bender." See you in a few weeks.

5 What lineup changes might Lovie Smith be preparing to make?

Replace plush and fuzzy teddy bears on the O-line with actual blockers.

Lovie was really impressed by Betty White's hobbling route-running in that Snickers commercial.

The same kind the Titanic captain made when he shuffled the deck chairs.

Stealing the University of Wisconsin's offensive line. I am not joking.

New safeties, new OL, actual receivers, new GM, new coaches, new everything!

Theo Epstein
GETTY IMAGES FILE

Why the long wait on Epstein?

Mike Quade, still manager of the Cubs, had a favorite saying whenever his team came out on top despite a dire predicament:

"We never do anything the easy way."

So it should come as no surprise to anyone who has paid attention to the 2011 Cubs that the Theo Epstein contract negotiations would not be different.

One day after the Cubs and Epstein agreed to a five-year deal worth more than $15 million, negotiations over compensation for the Red Sox were at a standstill.

A major league source said late Thursday one of the holdups is the Cubs' insistence on paying only cash for compensation while the Red Sox are adamant on receiving a player or a package of players.

Epstein's deal won't be finalized until they

SANDBERG MOVEMENT

Once Epstein is installed, the "Hire Ryne Sandberg" movement is bound to begin anew, and already may have begun. Smashing Pumpkins leader Billy Corgan, a noted Cubs fan, made a personal plea to Epstein on Thursday on the "WGN Morning News." "Please, please hire Ryne Sandberg," Corgan said. "White Sox Nation followed Ozzie all those years. I think Cubs Nation will follow Ryno."

come to an accord. Both sides apparently are playing hardball, so it could get contentious. However, the Tribune's source said there are no concerns the deal will fall through.

MORE DANCING

See Matt Pals' 3-star review of "Footloose" on PAGE 23.

Forbidden dance

'Footloose' stars and director grew up on the Kevin Bacon flick—but they've got their own rug to cut

By Matt Pals | REDEYE

Yeah, right. Like any town would outlaw dancing, as officials do in the 1984 movie "Footloose" and its remake, opening Friday. Or would they?

"Our producers searched, just to make sure it still was relevant, to see if anything like this was still happening," says newcomer Kenny Wormald, who plays the Ren McCormack role originated by Kevin Bacon, "and they stopped counting at 100 towns that had a ban on dancing."

Adds director and former Bolingbrook resident Craig Brewer ("Hustle and Flow"), "It's a lot more common than you'd think. There's one town in Orange County, they just canceled prom."

OK then. The story—city boy Ren's arrival to the small Southern town of Bomont strikes a chord with rebellious Ariel (Julianne Hough) and her preacher father (Dennis Quaid), who supported the town's ban on dancing—is still relevant. And the highly entertaining remake proves that you can create an enjoyable drama that happens to involve a lot of dancing. (As opposed to stupidly clichéd movies such as those in the "Step Up" franchise, which exist only for their dance sequences.)

During our interview, Hough, 23, Wormald, 27, and Brewer, 39 (who passed on the movie twice), all note that the movie is not, as was originally planned (causing Zac Efron to drop out of the project), a musical that would, as Wormald puts it, include singing in grocery stores.

From a Wrigley Field suite during an early September Cubs game, the "Footloose" trio talked about the film, famous Ariels and Hough and boyfriend Ryan Seacrest's obsession with mouthwash.

Who's the more famous Ariel: Ariel from "Footloose" or from "The Little Mermaid"?

Julianne H.: [Laughs]

Kenny W.: "The Little Mermaid."

JH: [sings like Ariel the mermaid]

KW: It's Disney, man. You can't mess with Disney.

Craig B.: I got a 3-year-old daughter. And all the princesses, it's all about dress color. Belle is a yellow dress. Cinderella, blue dress.

JH: Ariel has red hair.

CB: Aurora from "Sleeping Beauty"?

JH: Pink!

CB: You pass.

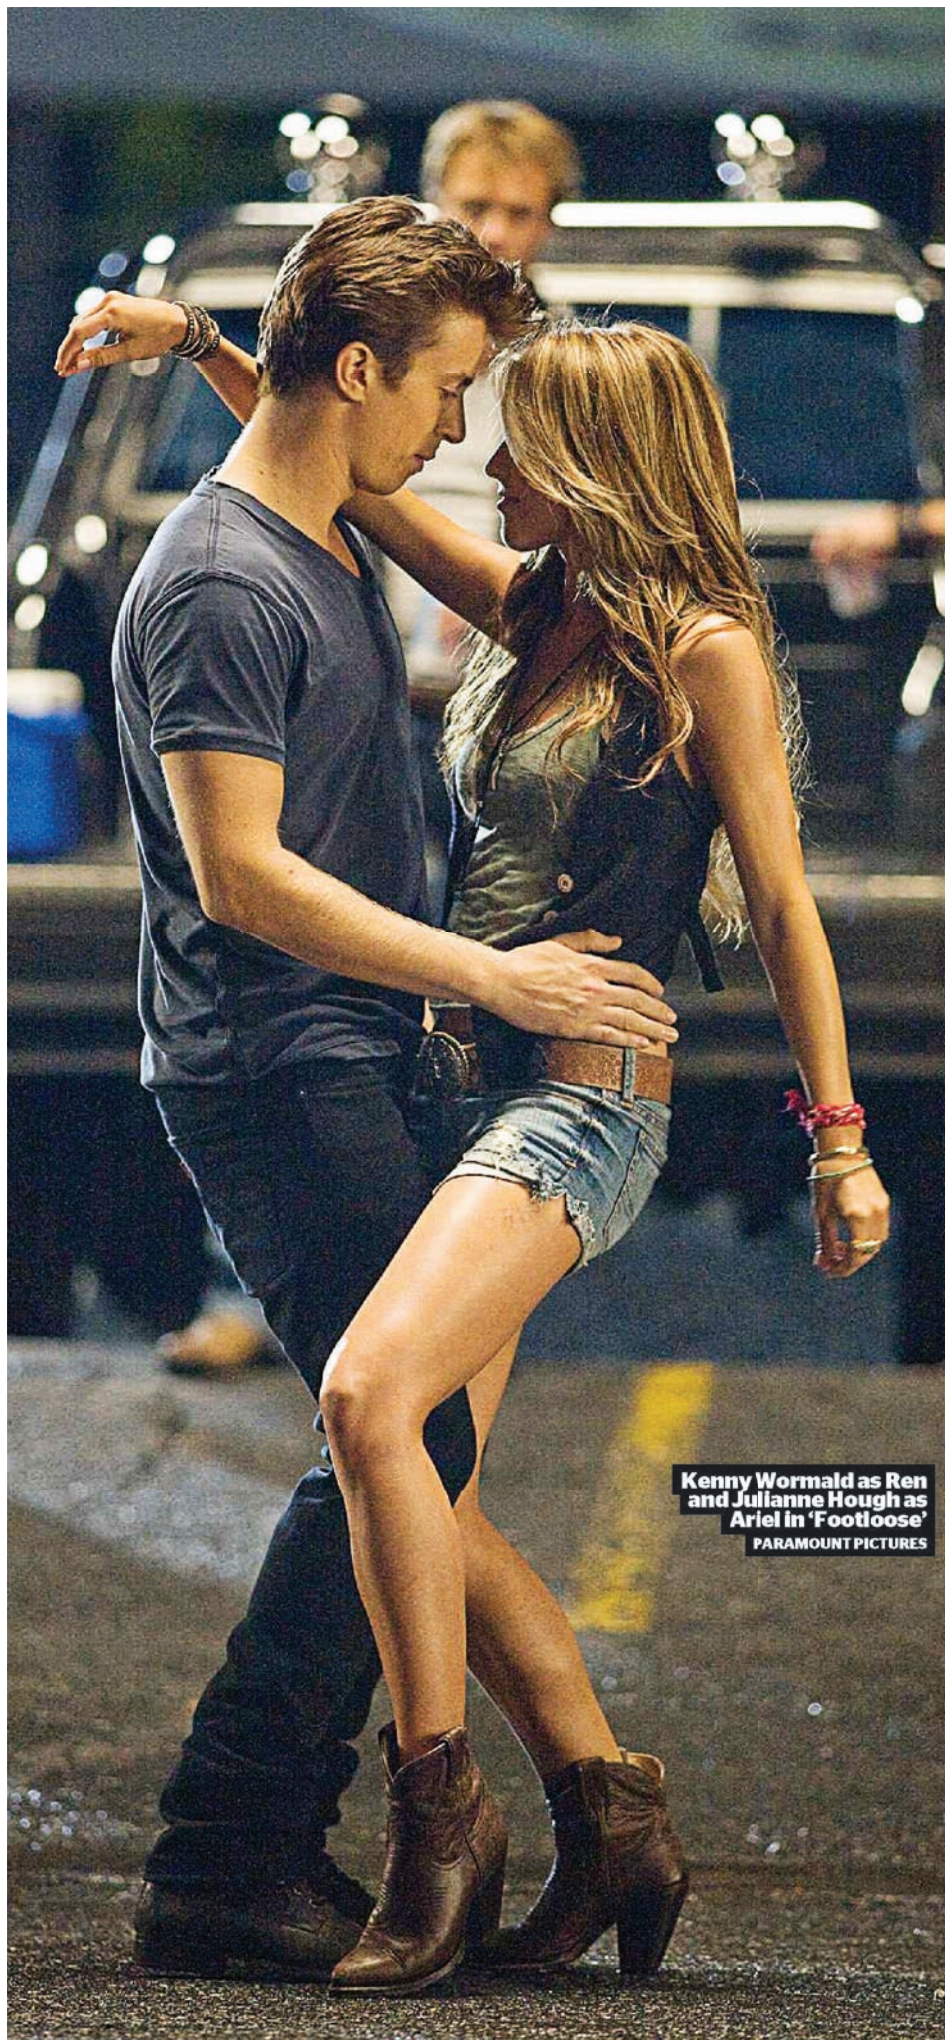

What did you think of the original "Footloose," and why did you want to be part of the remake?

KW: I loved the original film as a kid. I didn't see it in theaters, but I saw it on VHS when I was about 10 years old. I absolutely loved it. I was dancing then, and to see a guy dance and do the things he was doing and make it look cool was really amazing, 'cause I used to get made fun of for going to dance and missing baseball practice 'cause I'm going to dance. So to see something like that really stuck with me forever, and then to come back and get the opportunity to remake that, what inspired me so much, is amazing.

JH: And growing up in Utah, if you didn't like "Footloose" or had never seen it, then something was wrong with you. That was literally our movie. It was shot there, and growing up in Utah, kinda similar religious background, and so I loved it more than anything. Those types of movies were the movies that depicted what I wanted to do in the future.

Kenny Wormald as Ren and Julianne Hough as Ariel in 'Footloose'
PARAMOUNT PICTURES

Julianne, as a kid you often passed by the mills where Kevin Bacon did the angry dance. How many times did you stop and recreate it by yourself?

JH: Well, never. Not once. I kind of feel like now that I made the movie and I didn't get an angry dance, I might just go—

CB: You gotta go ahead and do it. Just rage.

JH: And just do it.

Kenny, how often do you dance out your anger?

KW: ... Two days ago I taught a dance class in Toronto; we were doing promo stuff, and I found that after the class I was just very relaxed. I'm like, "Wow, that's crazy." Dancing is therapeutic. It sounds silly and goofy, but I understand why Ren rages out and has to do that—because he can't talk to anyone at that point. He can't do anything about it. So ... it's actually true, man; people work out and they feel better and relaxed. It's the same thing. You can dance and express something and get it out. But I've never gone into a factory and broken windows and—

CB: Swung from a chain, or do any gymnastic [routines]? No, you don't do that?

KW: No! [Laughs]

CB: That's like a Saturday for me, are you kidding me?

I asked my wife if she had any questions for you today, and she said I should ask what kind of boob tape you use on "Dancing with the Stars" to keep the goods from falling out?

JH: [Laughs] I like your wife!

KW: That's a new question!

CB: We haven't been asked that, congratulations.

KENNY WORMALD, on throwing out the first pitch at Wrigley Field: "I gotta tell you, I was pretty damn nervous. I think I did well. I'd give myself an A-, B+. It hit the dirt. But I was better than all the other sponsor people who threw out their first pitch." TRIBUNE PHOTO

JH: It's called Top Stick. And it's pretty dang good.

KW: All the girls in the business use Top Stick.

Julianne, you and Ryan Seacrest might be the couple with the brightest teeth. How often do you have to put on sunglasses just to look at them?

JH: [Laughs.] Actually I was just thinking about that. I need to get some better—

KW: Crest White Strips.

JH: Yeah, right?

KW: Send 'em.

JH: We are kind of addicted to mouthwash. Like constantly fresh breath.

What's an '80s movie that should never be remade?

KW: "Top Gun." Although I would do it.

MPAIS@TRIBUNE.COM | @MATTPAIS

JULIANNE HOUGH, on the notion of avoiding another role involving dancing: "I thought that; after I shot 'Footloose' I had done 'Burlesque,' and even though 'Footloose' is not a musical, it still kind of ranges in that category. And then I was approached to do 'Rock of Ages,' and I was like, 'You know, I don't know if I want to do another musical.' And then Tom Cruise and Alec Baldwin were attached, and I'm like, 'OK, maybe one more.'"

Do not even think about shaking those hips in Bomont, Ga., Ariel (Julianne Hough), no matter how impressively your jeans hug 'em. (One character notes her pants are so tight you can see if a quarter in her back pocket shows heads or tails.) This town has outlawed that sort of unholy business, and your reverend father (Dennis Quaid) isn't going to let Boston-native Ren McCormack (Kenny Wormald) swoop into town and use his confidence and fancy footwork to change anyone's mind, ya hear?

The buzz: The 1984 "Footloose" may look cheesy in hindsight, but it made Kevin Bacon a star and holds up as a story of the ineffectiveness of a repressive society in combating fear and pain. A more important element that this remake, directed by Craig Brewer ("Hustle and Flow"), aims to maintain: Let's party, y'all!

The verdict: Yes, "Footloose" is still corny and dips into melodrama like a bash that unwisely puts on Michael McDonald. It also finds a victorious sense of pride in dancing your ass off—good clean rebellion if there ever was some. Clever modernizations update the story without losing its roots (don't worry, you'll still hear "Let's Hear It For the Boy").

And Wormald steps in just fine as a guy who believes in doing something in a town that's against seemingly everything. Miles Teller ("Rabbit Hole") is also a hoot as Ren's pal Willard (played by the late Chris Penn in the original). Some may groan at the liberal fight against conservative small-town ways, but everyone should rally behind a joyful movie that puts fire in your feet.

Kenny Wormald in 'Footloose'

If there's one thing scientists in Antarctica should do when examining an alien found in a block of ice, it's make sure the creature, which is capable of disguising itself as a human and other living things, doesn't escape. Oops.

The buzz: I know what you're thinking: At last, the feature directorial debut from Matthijs van Heijningen Jr.! Uh, that name might be more obscure than John Carpenter, who made 1982's version of "The Thing," a still-unsettling horror flick in which suspicion and an ugly beast consume the stranded souls who wonder which friend has become a vessel for something very unfriendly.

The verdict: Paleontologist Kate (Mary Elizabeth Winstead of "Scott Pilgrim vs. the World") explains what the alien can do so many times it's surprising the monster doesn't speak up and say, "They get it!" This phony-looking, CGI-heavy prequel still offers a uniquely grotesque killer once it appears part-human, but nothing swallows suspense like loud action sequences in which people stand around looking at the giant mass of spikes and tentacles instead of running. Of course, when the characters—many of whom are distinguishable only by the color of their beards—talk, they say things like, "We find it, we kill it." As opposed to what, take the demon out for pizza?

Did you know? Without giving away the entire joke, the beginning of the movie features a funny crack with the punchline, "It's not so funny when it's your mom, is it?" A monster movie with one laugh puts it one laugh ahead of most.

ALSO SHOWING

Fireflies in the Garden (R)

Ponderously mopey when it's not foolishly goofy, "Fireflies in the Garden" has all the personality and forward momentum of a cardboard box.

The movie's been on the shelf since 2008 and apparently was shot before Ryan Reynolds developed screen presence. "Garden" stars Mr. Green Lantern as Michael, an author whose professional success has generated absolutely zero happiness thanks to his toxic relationship with his terrible dad (Willem Dafoe) and crumbling relationship with his wife (Carrie-Anne Moss), whose newfound sobriety receives a brief mention and that's about it.

Most of writer-director Dennis Lee's melodrama focuses on Michael's tormented adolescence and the present-day death of his mother (Julia Roberts) in a careless car accident, all in a failed effort to make a point about confronting pain in person, not in writing. That's sort of hypocritical for a film that's semi-autobiographical.

The only thing you'll remember is that Roberts receives noticeable makeup to age her from the flashbacks to the present day, but Dafoe doesn't. Clearly the makeup department thought he didn't need it. Ouch.

Green Lantern
(PG-13)
A test pilot (Ryan Reynolds) is granted a mystical green ring that bestows him with otherworldly powers and membership in an intergalactic squadron tasked with keeping peace within the universe. At the core is the story of how the pilot is selected and how his green ring can focus all the willpower of the universe. His story is interesting, but it has far too much competition in this film. The film's at its best when the pilot tries to figure out his new powers while defending Earth. Taking the story to the dark and dismal world of Oa, home to the Guardians who put together the Green Lantern Corps, is distracting. The best characters are members of the Green Lantern Corps, especially Mark Strong as Sinestro. He plays the role with the kind of power we want to see in our heroes.

Horrible Bosses
Three mistreated employees hatch a plot to eliminate their bad bosses. The spot-on comedic work by the six actors—Jason Bateman, Kevin Spacey, Jason Sudeikis, Colin Farrell, Charlie Day, Jennifer Aniston—would be reason enough to put this on your must-rent list. But there's more. Director Seth Gordon accents the comedy with great supporting players, primarily Jamie Foxx, whose character name can't be printed. Also, the pacing is perfect and the writing smart. Gordon shows that comedy can be edgy and raunchy without being mean or gross. The result is one of the funniest films of the year.

ALSO OUT THIS WEEK:

"The Tree of Life": The story of a complicated relationship between a father and son. Brad Pitt and Sean Penn star.

"Judy Moody and the Not Bummer Summer": An imaginative young girl creates her own vacation adventures.

"Lunopolis": Two documentaries uncover proof of a hidden city on the moon.

"Devil's Playground": When an experimental new drug treatment goes wrong, thousands of patients turn into killers.

MONEYBALL

@brills16: Brad Pitt and Jonah Hill in Money Ball compliment each other perfectly. Amazing underdog story with hilarious comedy as well @itskelliwithani: Moneyball: Not just for baseball lovers, but for everyone, any age. You'll be on the edge of your seat w/ hope for the underdog.

IDES OF MARCH

@jamesamolnar: Ides of March: Dynamic storytelling, excellent casting & spot on ending. BUT it could have packed a little more punch. 4/5

@salkken: Star-studded Ides of March terrific. Will Clooney fans bother with political film? Gosling, PS Hoffman, Wood & Tomei excel.

OTHERS

@jactig: 50/50: 50% chance you'll cry, 100% obvious Seth Rogan plays ONE character in every movie he's in

@mroyt: Saw "The Clown" at chifilmfest. Beautiful story of a touring brazilian circus & the importance of family & doing what u love. 5/5

@othy: loved the new song, "The Sphere of Life" from THE LION KING 3-D! Really added dimension to a childhood favorite...

@davidheiser: Drive is a film noir w/ an unexpected thirst for blood. Gosling is great, but cinematography & soundtrack are the real stars.

The Big Year
(PG)

Aside from an international staring contest and the World Series of Texting, there aren't many challenge-es less suited for a movie than competitive bird watching.

(Excuse me—apparently bird watching is called “birding,” even though “fishing” doesn't just mean “people looking at fish.”)

As three dopes (Jack Black, Steve Martin, Owen Wilson) travel North America, totally disregarding the sights so they can glimpse different species of birds and move on, the battle to maximize their annual bird-spotting total becomes a sorry demonstration of guys who'd rather scope out animals than spend time with, say, an ailing father, a new grandson or a wife who wants to have a baby.

The laugh-free, based-on-a-true-story “The Big Year” shamelessly humiliates an innocent woman on her honeymoon in an attempt at comedy and awkwardly includes Coldplay's “Viva La Vida,” as if that could make this expedition look exciting.

Only their own love of birds could possibly explain why Rashida Jones, Joel McHale, Rosamund Pike, Dianne Wiest, Anjelica Huston, Jim Parsons, Brian Dennehy and Anthony Anderson accepted thankless supporting roles in a film that communicates its central passion about as well as 6-year-olds talking about why they like Pokemon.

Trespass (R)

Written and acted as if the tension is meant to be broken, “Trespass” features victims (Nicolas Cage, Nicole Kidman, Liana Liberato) who are as dumb as the criminals (Cam Gigandet, Dash Mihok, Ben Mendelsohn, Jordana Spiro) trying to rob their house. When he's not yelling, Cage for some reason speaks as if he has peanut butter in his mouth, which is hilarious even when he's not talking about the etymology of the word “diamond.” Everyone knew Cage and director Joel Schumacher (“The Number 23”) had sunk to this level, but Kidman? It's also very sad to see the promising Liberato, so good in David Schwimmer's “Trust,” wrapped up in this mess, which recalls the absurd Harrison Ford thriller “Firewall.” That ain't a compliment.

BRAINS GANG

GHOULIES AND GROSS-OUTS GALORE ON SEASON TWO OF 'WALKING DEAD'

SHOW PATROL

Curt Wagner

» cwwagner@tribune.com
» @showpatrol

Fans of AMC's "The Walking Dead" were thrilled this summer when the Season 2 trailer hit San Diego Comic-Con and the Web. It began with dozens of hungry zombies shuffling after Shane Walsh (Jon Bernthal), who stumbles just as the flesh eaters are reaching out to chow on him.

Believe it or not, the dramatic scene has been cut from Sunday's 90-minute premiere of the hit series for less flashy but brilliant-in-their-own-way moments. How many TV shows can dump such a chilling chase yet still send shivers up your spine?

I'm happy to report that even in the absence of Frank Darabont, who ushered Robert Kirkman's acclaimed graphic novel to the small screen last year, "The Walking Dead" can.

Its cast, crew and new showrunner, Glen Mazzara, seem to live to thrill. And boy do they succeed in "What Lies Ahead" on Sunday and next week's "Bloodletting."

The ghoulies, created by makeup king Greg Nicotero and his team, are as disgusting as ever, with their sunken eyes, rotting flesh and love for a tasty skin sandwich or raw liver. Speaking of innards, one particular scene in the opener is so nasty I predict audience members either will A) cover their eyes, B) sneak with delight or C) lose their lunch.

At its core, though, the series remains an absorbing survivalist story about the humans in peril. It examines how regular people can adapt and keep their sanity when their world is turned upside down.

The new season opens with the group of survivors led by lawman Rick Grimes (Andrew Lincoln) leaving Atlanta for Fort Benning, where they hope to find an outpost of living humans. Of course, they encounter a little bad luck when their caravan breaks down on a highway blocked by abandoned cars.

"This is a graveyard," Rick's wife, Lori (Sarah Wayne Callies), says as they pick through the ruins for useful items. "I don't know how I feel about this."

How they all feel about it, and how they hold on to their humanity in these inhumane conditions, appears to be a central theme in Season 2 as Rick doubts his every decision and individual members of the group begin to bicker. Just as the group seems to fracture, they meet several intriguing new characters, which helps the show to keep viewers riveted by more human stories.

And yes, shortly after Lori utters the quote above, a herd of shuffling stiffies attacks the group. What happens next sets in motion a new season of jump-from-your-seat scares and shivery twists that will leave you breathless.

I spoke with "The Walking Dead" stars Andrew Lincoln and Norman Reedus about the new season. The secrets collected on these pages come from them and discussions at Comic-Con.

» Rick Grimes (Lincoln) and company flee zombie-filled Atlanta for the countryside, but not before coming up against a wall of flesh-loving walkers on the highway. "Every time we opened the script, we were like, 'Holy Mother, where are we going now?'" Lincoln said.

“ The stuff that happens to Rick and his family in the first two episodes is monumental. And that's just three characters within this group of 12.”

—Andrew Lincoln, on the roller-coaster ride that is Season 2

» Tensions between Rick's wife, Lori, and his best friend, Shane, will grow. Lincoln teases that Rick will learn the secret the other two share: "Yes, there will be some resolution. As yet, I still don't know [how]."

» One-handed, racist hick Merle Dixon (Michael Rooker), whom the group left for dead in Season 1, returns. Reedus, who plays Merle's brother, Daryl, hints that Merle's re-introduction may lead viewers to sympathize with Daryl: "[Daryl's] a guy that's just incredibly emotionally and spiritually damaged. ... You discover why I'm such a hothead and the things that I went through. So there's a whole back story about my family life that entered into this, and that's super interesting and super sad."

» The villainous Governor from the graphic novels will not show up this season, but sword-wielding Michonne might, producers told Entertainment Weekly.

» Rick continues to broadcast in hopes of reuniting with Morgan (Lennie James), but we will not see Morgan in Season 2.

MORE ONLINE

Go to showpatroltv.com for "The Walking Dead" interviews, video sneak peeks and photo galleries.

» A shocking accident sends the survivors to the farm of Hershel Greene (Scott Wilson), who will challenge Rick's beliefs about the world in which they now live. "Hershel represents that side of humanity [that still has] hope that one day an airplane may drop something that has the vaccine," Lincoln said. "I certainly think that is one of [Rick's] struggles; he's still trying to hold on to some semblance of hope. Otherwise, what's left?"

» Hershel's daughter, Maggie (Lauren Cohan), will become a love interest for Glenn (Steven Yeun).

» We (probably) will learn what the CDC doctor whispered in Rick's ear at the end of Season 1. Said Lincoln: "I'm not going to tell you! ... There is something that happens in Episode 9 that seems extraordinary and brutal, but that may give you a clue."

» Rick and Daryl (Reedus) share a scene in the season premiere that likely will launch many a water-cooler discussion. "Every day we have one of those scenes where we're trying to get it censored, and if we don't get it censored, [we think] we're not trying hard enough, you know?" Lincoln said. "We're really pushing the boundaries."

“You can't not look cool holding a crossbow.”

—Norman Reedus, on his love for Daryl's weapon of choice

» Reedus says he's digging deeper into Daryl's character this season and that he never wanted to play him as a Merle Jr. He'll demonstrate his ability to survive, to lead and even to form relationships within the group. "You see everybody just start deteriorating and he's sort of excelling," Reedus said.

» Reedus was almost giddy when he learned that one of his Season 1 scenes made me pass out. He said to expect more of the same in Season 2: "That is my goal for the rest of the season. I'm going to make you pass out ... I hope you faint a bunch."

Vampires, zombies & ghosts ... oh my!

Pop culture pundits are saying that ghosts are the new vampires lately. But aren't they really the new zombies, since last year at this time those same pundits said zombies were the new vampires? Besides, reality shows such as "Ghost Hunters" and "Paranormal State" have been around for a long time proving or disproving hauntings. To prove who the reigning supernatural being is in scripted TV shows, we decided to chart it out. c.w.

Comic bull's-eye

MCT

Filmmaker and journalist Ann Nocenti has joined the DC Comics stable of writers.

In late August, DC Comics rebooted its entire comic line, all 52 titles, renumbering them from No. 1. This has opened up a new world for characters such as “Batman,” “Superman,” “Wonder Woman,” “The Justice League” and, of course, “Green Arrow.”

Nocenti, an old-time comics writer, worked extensively at Marvel Comics in the 1980s and with DC in the 1990s on its “Kid Eternity” issue. She left to do journalism and film, which she continues to teach.

“I always really missed comics,” Nocenti says from New York. “It’s a really friendly, fun, intimate medium that I missed a lot. I traveled the world and made documentaries and features, did a lot of journalism, ran magazines. I never forgot about comics. They were always in the back of my head as something endearing, like a lost beloved pet or something.”

She was pulled back into comics by old friends, including DC Editor-In-Chief Bob Harras and co-publisher Dan DiDio. She wondered about herself, “Let’s see if I could still have some ideas of this medium.”

She takes over as the regular writer of “Green Arrow” as of issue seven.

Mark Hamill’s next gig: comic consultant

The Wrap

Mark Hamill will apply the force to an upcoming superhero comic book series called “NEW-GEN,” the comic’s creators announced Thursday at New York Comic-Con.

The man who played Luke Skywalker in the original “Star Wars” movies will serve as a creative consultant for the franchise, including an upcoming live-action feature film production. To introduce Hamill, the company will release a special six-issue graphic novel, “NEW-GEN: Volume One,” featuring a forward from Hamill, who shares his thoughts on this next-generation comic franchise that evolves around the battle over nanotechnology.

“NEW-GEN” founder and creator J.D. Matonti will direct the feature film, with the franchise’s Julia Coppola and Chris Matonti serving as the film’s executive producer and producer. The series is distributed by Marvel Comics.

We feel you have the right to use your DEBIT CARD without a $5 monthly fee and have the checking account that’s right for you.

You may have heard about a big bank that’s going to charge $5 a month to use your debit card. Or yet, another big bank that is charging high fees for their checking accounts.

The ability to use a debit card without a monthly fee still exists in Chicago and its suburbs at your Wintrust Community Banks. You most likely know our community banks such as; Barrington Bank & Trust, Beverly Bank & Trust, Hinsdale Bank & Trust, Lincoln Park Community Bank, North Shore Community Bank & Trust, Northbrook Bank & Trust, and Ravenswood Community Bank, just to name a few. Wintrust Community Banks are involved in their communities and provide the best customer service with innovative financial solutions, so that you can truly have the best of both worlds.

The right checking account for you over a cup of coffee at a bank where the staff knows your name—what a concept. Find your local Wintrust Community Bank at www.wintrust.com/findus.

$5 a month for 12 months is $60 a year! That’s 60 reasons to leave a big bank.

We think it’s wrong to charge a customer a monthly fee of $5 to use their debit card. We’ll pay you $60 for your ideas on what you would do with the $60 you’d save by leaving a big bank! Simply use the Twitter hashtag #my60bucks or go to my60bucks.com in the next 60 days. Then vote for your favorite. 60 people will win $60. No purchase or bank account is necessary. Tell Chicago how you really feel about the big mega banks.

WINTRUST
COMMUNITY BANKS

Find our most convenient bank for you at wintrust.com/findus.

Banking services, such as checking accounts, provided by Wintrust Financial Corp. banks (Member FDIC and Equal Housing Lender). Wintrust does not charge its customers a monthly card usage fee and there are no transaction charges at any of the ATMs in the Money Pass or Sum surcharge - free networks, including the Wintrust family of banks. Any other banks outside the networks may impose ATM surcharges at their machines. “60 Bucks” promotion will run from October 6, 2011 through December 5, 2011. Only one vote per person, per day.

OFF TO A GOOD

The story: This Lincoln Park breakfast and lunch cafe from Gregory Ellis and Steven Fladung, who grew up and worked at Charlie Trotter's together, is a boon for those who adore artisanal eats; they make as much as possible from scratch, from the pickles on the Cuban sandwich ($12) to the ketchup on the burger ($12). The name's a nod to the Greek myth about two sparrows pulling the chariot of Aphrodite, the goddess of agriculture—so appropriate since they're all about using the best produce and meats from local farms. Birdy details such as a nest-shaped chandelier and Rishi tea served in tiny teapots resembling speckled eggs charmingly enforce the subtle theme.

Loved it: Shrimp and grits with tasso ham gravy ($12) was smoky, creamy and soul-soothing. Sandwiches are served with perfectly crunchy house-made tater tots the size of campfire marshmallows. Consider me addicted.

Almost there: A pork belly biscuit sandwich with a sunnyside-up egg and pickled onions ($10) is on the right track but could use some tweaking; it's just a bit too tall to tackle as a sandwich but too crumbly to eat with a fork, and there isn't enough yolk to keep the whole thing from feeling dry-ish. The apricot pop tart ($4) is dripping with delish lemon-thyme frosting, but I wish the pastry was soft enough to cut with my fork. Servers were a bit shaky (literally—mine looked visibly nervous), but surely everyone will loosen up as the cafe moves beyond opening week.

Bottom line: I'm rooting for 2 Sparrows and definitely will return, especially after a liquor license arrives and the bar is stocked with local brews and spirits. LISA ARNETT, REDEYE

For a taste of what's new on the dining scene, we waited in line at Magnolia Bakery and sat down for breakfast at Lincoln Park's latest addition, 2 Sparrows. Here are our quick takes on both.

ALREADY HOT

The story: A few days before Magnolia Bakery opened its Chicago location on State Street on Oct. 1, owner Steve Abrams told us that even though the NYC-based bakery is famous for its cupcakes, we'd forget about them after tasting the banana pudding and cheesecake. Challenge accepted, Mr. Abrams.

The scene: Magnolia is bringing something Block 37 hasn't seen in a while: crowds. Opening weekend saw lines out the door, but weekday mornings have been quieter. This is the bakery's most spacious location, with a retro-licious pastel look, plenty of seating and busy bakers providing entertainment while you wait. Rather than order off a menu, just look in the pastry cases and pick as you make your way to the register.

The food: We have no qualms with eating dessert in the morning, but Magnolia does have traditional a.m. snacks, including a soft and fluffy pumpkin-pecan muffin ($2.50). Mini-cheesecakes ($6) are sweet and silky, and the white chocolate-macadamia nut version sits atop a perfect graham cracker crust. Peppermint icebox cake ($4.50 a slice) is made from chocolate wafers that take on just the right texture (not too crunchy, not too mushy) between layers of fluffy whipped cream. (Note to self: Bring this to a holiday party.) If you try nothing else, make it the banana pudding, a creamy amalgam of soft and flaky vanilla wafers, banana slices and vanilla pudding that's somehow insanely light and indulgently rich at the same time. To die for.

Bottom line: Magnolia's classic vanilla and chocolate cupcakes are simple and sweet, with that trademark swirl of frosting providing just enough sugary buttercream to balance the cake below. But sure enough, it's the banana pudding we'd wait in line for next time.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

@mattpais' music question of the week asked:

Ever been backstage at a concert? Tell us when, where, how and anything else of note.

TWITTER

@JCoops87: snuck backstage at the Edward Sharpe show at Congress theater. Met all the band members and then eventually we were kicked out!

@erincropper: Got backstage at Bonnaroo & Soldier Field Deadmau5 shows. Met him & got a pic with him, & he autographed our mouse heads!

@colleens2sweet: I worked backstage for Snoop Dogg & LMFAO at ISU. LMFAO let me skateboard with them in the hallways backstage & i wiped out.

@IdeKraai: I got to go backstage at a modest mouse show because I almost passed out in the front row of the mosh pit. #coolsecuritydudes

@marypanzarella: Threw underwear onstage at a Pepper concert. Didn't make it backstage but the bassist did wear my thong on his head for a bit @marypanzarella: Rebelution concert. Wrote my # on a piece of paper & threw it onstage. Backstage saw lots of smoking, drinking, & making out!

@byobandits: We got backstage (the hard way) at The Congress and stole some of Big Boi's fried chicken. He's partial to Brown's, who knew?

@markbeers: While working as a production runner for the Rolling Stones one of my other runners got to buy controlled narcotics for Mick.

FACEBOOK

Alexis Puhala: scored after party passes at a nine inch nails concert. drank cheap beer and got some autographs, but trent reznor was no where to be seen. peaches opened the show and i smoked one of her cigarettes. that was the highlight.

Rebecca Mis: A friend and I paid to get backstage at a Nine Inch Nails show in 2009 (the money went to a guy who needed a heart transplant). We got to meet the whole band, got autographs and a photo, after which I gave Trent Reznor a huge hug, and got to talk to him a little. Then we got to eat backstage, and during the show we got to be on the side of the stage for three or four songs. That was an unforgettable night.

IT'S GAMETIME BABY!

Finally, it's that time to gather your friends and family for some football and fresh wings!

3 SONGS I

BY MIKE MEERING, MANAGER AT THE BEDFORD

NEW

Where I'm Going Cut Copy

This song has tasty harmonies and reminds me of The Beach Boys, actually. I became very aware of Cut Copy when they did a DJ set at The Bedford after they played at Pitchfork. We also have a Cut Copy poster hanging outside the women's bathroom that has been there since we opened.

THE STONE ROSES

OLD

I Am the Resurrection Stone Roses

This song is a jingle-jangle crescendo of face-melting rock. We are big fans of this band at The Bedford, as well as lots of the British bands that followed, such as Blur, Oasis, Pulp, Radiohead, etc

PROTEST SONG

Signs Five Man Electrical Band

"Signs" speaks of frustration over rules and the abuse of authority. This tune is the best thing to come out of Canada since ice hockey.

ALBUM REVIEW

!!!! Biophilia
Bjork

Bjork has always been about the grand statement. After launching a career in groundbreaking dance music, she shifted to icy electronic music ("Homo-genic") and built an entire a cappella album ("Medulla"). But what happens when her latest development isn't exactly about the music?

The hook on her latest album, "Biophilia" (Nonesuch), is that all the songs come with iPad apps to enhance the experience. That's ambitious artistically, if not musically.

Much of "Biophilia" draws from previous Bjork incarnations, especially the spare, swirling electronic beauty of the "Vespertine" era. The layers of plinky prettiness of "Moon" and the remarkably straightforward "Cosmogony" show off her clear vocals and a simple interest in astronomy.

Bjork offers a bit of her unique take on the world in the gorgeously memorable "Virus,"

Bjork
GETTY IMAGES FILE

where she poetically declares over a clatter of chimes and a trip-hop beat, "Like a virus needs a body, a soft tissue feeds on blood, some day I'll find you." It's that kind of off-kilter point of view that is too often missing on "Biophilia," as if her creative energy was pointed elsewhere instead of at the actual songs.

"Biophilia" also could use an injection of dance-floor swagger at times. When the pounding, drum 'n' bass rhythm arrives halfway through the lovely "Crystalline," it reminds us of all the wild sonic places Bjork has been and how much fun that trip can be. "Biophilia," though pleasant enough, feels like a sonic stacycation. GLENN GAMBOA, NEWSDAY

Red hot & wild

Chicago rockers Red City answered our Chi-Tunes questionnaire at metromix.com. Do the same and your band could appear in RedEye and Metromix!

What makes your live show great?

Our live show is great because it is very intense. In the early days, our stage show gained some notice on the Chicago scene because we were louder, faster and wilder than most other rock bands around at the time. Our new brand of intensity is more fluid and organized than what we used to do. We have taken steps forward as a group to make our live show something special. We have very rowdy fans, so our shows are always a blast to play. It's great party music, but it also has substance.

Describe your sound in five words or less.

Balls to the wall

Tell us something random about the band, and why that's significant.

We all have different backgrounds and influences. Our guitarist, Mayo, was born and raised in Slovakia. He is primarily influenced by European arena rock. Frontman Wags shaped a lot of his sound in a blues and '70s rock party atmosphere on rural college campuses. Bobby contributes a blue-collar drumming style with his powerful but punctual playing. We have a brand new bassist named

Listen to "Crimson Elixir" at metromix.com

Tim who brings more of a metal and alternative aspect to the sound as well.

If the band were a breakfast cereal, what would it be and why?

Honey Bunches of Oats. There are lots of unique aspects to our influences and history that come together to taste delicious in the end.

What's the best album you've heard recently?

"Angles" by The Strokes

What song do you never want to hear again?

"Crazy Bitch" by Buckcherry

What is Chicago's best music venue and why?

We have had some great experiences at The Elbo Room. We got our start there, and they have been really good to us ever since. The staff is amazing and the club is a great room to play.

12 BF dating commandments

The Date Report

Best friends are huge parts of our dating lives: They're with us through every crush, first date, relationship and breakup. Below are 12 "rights and responsibilities" that best friends must uphold for each other when it comes to dating.

- 1 We will analyze every text message from a crush, down to the punctuation, spacing and number of characters used. We understand that this will sometimes take hours.
- 2 We will agree that any crush is "really, really cute," and that assessment will remain constant until he or she shows a lack of interest, at which point they become "not even that cute, really ..."
- 3 We will dutifully listen to each other's sex questions, no matter how awkward or embarrassing. And what we don't know the answer to, we will happily help look up online.
- 4 We will always be available to be each other's Frienddicators/Date decoys/Official Third Wheels. That having been said ...
- 5 We will always carefully read each other's signals and know when to skee-daddle if either of us wants to be alone/make it happen with someone.
- 6 But if one of us utters the magic words: "Don't leave me alone with him/her," we will never, ever leave. Wild horses, baby.
- 7 We will gamely wingwoman for each other, even if it does mean taking one for the team and flirting with the boring friend.
- 8 We will dutifully mask the fact that we find each other's boyfriend or girlfriend secretly annoying/obnoxious. He will be invited to every group outing, and we will make an effort to talk to him and include him whenever we're all out together.
- 9 We will happily get dressed up and go "out on the town" to "hit on some hot guys!" and "get really drunk, like we used to!" if either of us feels the need to do this after a breakup.
- 10 We promise to keep close tabs on each other's exes so that if he/she suddenly has a new girlfriend, we can break the news gently. (And not just see it in the Facebook newsfeed.)
- 11 And we will NOT stay friends with each other's reviled exes (even if we think he or she was sort of nice).
- 12 We will never lose faith that the other is amazing and beautiful and wonderful and deserving of a perfect and lasting relationship. We will remind each other of this constantly.

Collars on call

Los Angeles Times

Prim and polished collars buttoned to the top are making a splash in fashion this fall. Celebrities such as Carey Mulligan and Alexa Chung are layering collared shirts under their crew-neck sweaters and pairing the sweet combo with knee-length skirts or cropped trousers. The look also popped up on runways for fall and next spring. Part menswear-inspired, part schoolgirl chic, the trend is more about styling an outfit than buying new pieces. It's all about the clean lines of a crisp shirt and sharp collar. For fall, DKNY showed bright-white Peter Pan collars peeking out from under stark black shirts, adding a dash of girliness to otherwise dark and sexy frocks. French label Sandro also incorporated collars into its fall 2011 collection, adding leopard-print collar details to mod-inspired black shift dresses to give the basic pieces a playful detail. Several looks with starched white collars also went down the runway at the Celine spring 2012 collection. The French house's clean and effortless aesthetic is such an influence in high-end and street fashion that collars probably will still be everywhere come spring. It's easy enough to style your existing button-down shirts in this more buttoned-up manner, or you can skip the shirt and just put a collar under a sweater. That might sound dorky. But these collars create the trendy silhouette without adding unwanted bulk under a fitted sweater. CeCe Toppings (cecetoppings.com) makes fun little collars in classic, Peter Pan and even ruffle-neck styles. The prints, including leopard and a preppy plaid, are especially cute. They can add a quirky little touch to an outfit with a pop of color and texture. And a classic, conservative collar can transform a simple black dress or V-neck sweater into an appropriate job-interview outfit. Each of the collars is less than $40, which generally is less expensive than a new button-down shirt. Wear one with a crew neck or V-neck sweater—though not too low-cut—and you'll instantly be trendy without the bulk of an extra shirt layer. Polished and preppy is a classic look for fall. Pair a buttoned-up collared shirt (or just the collar) with a classic crew neck sweater in a neutral color such as camel or heather gray.

Meet the star of 'Dolphin Tale'

Vacation that goes beyond the movie

The film "Dolphin Tale" features a bottlenose dolphin named Winter that receives a prosthetic tail after being seriously injured.

The Sheraton Sand Key Resort in Clearwater, Fla., has fashioned a package that comes with two tickets to the aquarium where Winter lives, plus a $50 resort credit with prices starting at $199 a night. The Winter the Dolphin package includes tickets to the Clearwater Marine Aquarium, where the dolphin has lived since 2005. The $50 credit may be used for food and beverages at the resort.

The offer is good through the end of the year, based on availability (weekends may be limited). The package requires a two-night minimum stay. Sheraton Sand Key Resort, 866-716-8106, tinyurl.com/3eonl99.

Paula Bustamante, Senior Marine Mammal trainer, works with Winter at Clearwater Marine Aquarium in Clearwater, Fla. GETTY IMAGES

Who needs planning? Host a Vegas party on the fly

Party without the planning? That's the idea behind the PartyScape Package in Las Vegas at the Monte Carlo, New York-New York, Luxor and Excalibur hotels and casinos.

Save up to 15 percent on rooms, score free drinks and a T-shirt with a pub crawl card, and receive discounts on restaurants and other extras. The package at each hotel comes with extras that vary from hotel to hotel. At the Monte Carlo, for example, the package includes 20 percent off a spa treatment, 20 percent discount at two restaurants and half-price beer at the pub during dueling pianos.

The pub crawl card lists 12 venues that offer rewards as you complete "the crawl." The offer is good for stays through Feb. 28, with some blackout dates. PartyScape Package, 877-353-1987, mgmresorts.com/vegasparyscape2011.

App it, then stay—all on the same night

Good news for the smartphone travel crowd: Priceline has added a new feature to its mobile app that offers same-night discounts at selected three- and four-star hotels.

Tonight-Only Deals displays three hotel options and prices—no bidding involved—at 11 a.m. local time daily that can be booked until 11 p.m. Users can peruse hotel options for one of 34 cities with descriptions, maps and even some Priceline user reviews before making an instant booking.

There's no blind booking or bidding here; fixed rates are last-minute offers the travel site negotiates with hotels, Priceline's Brian Ek says. The service is added to the free Hotel & Rental Car Negotiator app.

It's only available now for iPhone and iPad users. TRIBUNE NEWSPAPERS

TODAY IN THE YEAR ...

2003: During Game 6 of the National League Championship Series, Cubs fan Steve Bartman inadvertently deflected a foul ball away from the outstretched glove of Chicago outfielder Moises Alou; the Florida Marlins, down 3-0 at the time, rallied to win the game and went on to win Game 7 and advance to the World Series, where they defeated the New York Yankees.

That's what he said

Somebody hadn't been keeping up on her celeb gossip. Sarah Leal, the woman who claimed to have had a one-night stand with Ashton Kutcher, says she thought he was separated from Demi Moore, according to Us Weekly. Isn't that always the way?

Mayor of Apple?

Could the guy who plays Mayor Emanuel on "Saturday Night Live" also play Steve Jobs in a movie biopic? "[Andy Samberg] doesn't really look like him, but he doesn't really look like anybody he plays and he pulls it off," Tammara Billik, a casting director at Billik/Wood Casting in Sherman Oaks, Calif., told CNN. She's just speculating, of course, but it's an interesting thought.

“Part of me thinks that 'Family Guy' should have already ended.”

—“Family Guy” creator Seth MacFarlane to The Hollywood Reporter. He also revealed that a movie deal is in place.

SWISS BEATS

Whichever editor made this decision is a genius. Tyler, the Creator interviewed Nas for XXI's November issue. The Odd Future frontman didn't waste any time getting to the important stuff.

Tyler: Do you like cheese?

Nas: I love cheese.

Tyler: Cheddar or Swiss?

Nas: Swiss. Cheddar for the most of my life. Today, it's Swiss.

Tyler: Sick. That's cool. I love [bleepin'] cheddar. That's my [bleep].

Easy to follow

Britney Spears is the sixth person to collect 10 million followers on Twitter, eonline.com reports, crossing the threshold this week. With 10.1 million followers, Spears is hot on the heels of Kim Kardashian (10.3 million), though she'll have to really climb to catch top-ranked Lady Gaga (14.4 million).

THE DIGIT

$2.5 MILLION

That's the value of the Victoria's Secret Fantasy Treasure Bra, people.com reports. Miranda Kerr will model the blinged-out brassiere at the Victoria's Secret Fashion Show in November and in the Christmas catalog.
